CONNECTICUT CHURCH ORDERS BIG AUSTIN

REREDOS CONCEALS ORGAN

St. Mark's Episcopal Builds Contemporary Edifice on New Site—
To Complete Three-Manual Instrument for Easter 1961

A new three-manual Austin organ comprising four manual divisions and pedal will be installed in the new St. Mark's Episcopal Church, New Canaan, Conn. now under construction on a new site. Pre-cast concrete slabs in triangular sections will be a feature of the roof construction. Side walls feature brick and stained glass panels.

Architects are Sherwood, Mills and Smith, Stamford, Conn. and acoustical consultants are Bolt, Beranek and Newman.

The free-standing altar will be backed by a large open grille reredos extending from floor to ceiling. The grille will conceal the choir loft and organ which extend across the front of the building.

The organ itself will be located on a shelf construction immediately above and behind the choir. Choir seats are on elevated risers radiating out from the console which will be in the center front of the choir area. The organist will thus be facing both choir and organ and will hear everything in balance.

The building and organ are scheduled for completion by Easter 1961.

NEW BEDFORD CHURCH HAS AEOLIAN-SKINNER

FAXON PLAYS DEDICATORY

Whaling City in Massachusetts Gets 55-rank 3-manual—Charles Smith,
Edward Gammons, John Tyrrell
Draw Design

The new Aeolian-Skinner organ in Grace Episcopal Church, New Bedford, Mass. was dedicated Feb. 21 followed by an opening recital by George Faxon. His program appears on the recital page.

The design of the 55-rank instrument was planned by Charles G. Smith, Jr., organist and choirmaster, in consultation with Edward B. Gammons, Groton School, and John J. Tyrrell, vice-president of Aeolian-Skinner. To achieve low-pressure voicing with no pipe nicking, the great projects partly into the chancel through the existing wood screen. At the same elevation the positiv is bracketed on the opposite chancel wall. Two-and-a-half-inch pressure was used in the great and positiv except for the great trompette which is on five inches. The remainder of the organ is voiced on four-inch pressure.

The parish is one of the largest of the denomination in New England with about 1600 communicants.

HAROLD DARKE TOURS WEST INDIES; ORGAN RESTORED

Dr. Harold Darke, enthusiastically remembered by many Americans who attended the ICO in London in 1957, will reopen the organ at St. Michael's Church, Cornhill, May 30. The organ has been out of service since February while restoration and some alterations took place.

Dr. Darke's final recital before the work began was his 1602nd at Cornhill. While the restoration was being accomplished he made a tour of the West Indies.

THOMAS MATTHEWS

THOMAS MATTHEWS, MusD, FAGO has resigned his posts on the faculty of Northwestern University, as director of music at the Seabury-Western Seminary and as choirmaster and organist of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Evanston, Ill. effective at the end of the school year.

He will begin new duties Sept. 1 as organist and choir director of the Trinity Episcopal Church, Tulsa, Okla. where he will develop a boy choir program, and as chairman of a newly-established music department in the Holland Hall School.

Dr. Matthews is serving as the first dean of the new North Shore AGO Chapter. He has been extremely active in university, church and community affairs. He earned his FAGO in 1937 and was awarded the honorary MusD at the 1955 commencement ceremonies at Ripon, Wis. College.

Previous to his Evanston tenure Dr. Matthews served on the music staff of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City and as organist and choirmaster of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Philadelphia.

BIGGS PLAYS CONCERTOS IN 3 PARTS OF COUNTRY

E. Power Biggs was soloist Feb. 4 with the "little symphony" of the Seattle symphony orchestra, Milton Katims conducting, in a performance of concertos by Poulenc, Handel and Bach. He also appeared March 4 with the Buffalo Philharmonic orchestra, Joseph Wincenc conducting, at a "pops" concert in Kleinhans music hall playing the Cuckoo and Nightingale Concerto of Handel and a group of organ solos. A Schlicker organ was specially installed on the stage for the occasion.

A quartet of members of the Shreveport, La. symphony orchestra supported Mr. Biggs in a concert including music of Corelli, Mozart and Handel Feb. 21.

The magazine Horizon for March contains an article by Mr. Biggs on organs and the renaissance in our day of "awareness of basic principles of organ design and building."

BALDWIN-WALLACE STAGES 28TH FESTIVAL MAY 27-28

The entire program of five concerts of the twenty-eighth annual Bach festival at the Baldwin-Wallace Conservatory of Music, Berea, Ohio May 27 and 28 has been published. Cecil Munk is the director of the festival founded by the late Albert Riemenschneider and the conductors will be George Poinar who will direct the Art of Fugue, Brandenburg Concerto 6, Cantata 189 and the St. John Passion, John Robinson who will conduct the college choir in Jesu, Priceless Treasure, and Kenneth Snapp who will direct the brass choir in chorales from the tower.

Recitalists will include Rafael Puyana, harpsichord, Suzanne Blach, lute, Eva Heinitz, viola da gamba, and Mr. Poinar, violin. The festival orchestra and the Bach chorus will participate in the second, fourth and fifth events.

GEORGE WRIGHT'S appearance March 5 at San Francisco's Fox theater attracted 4,500 listeners at $2 apiece.

42 Anthems for Three-Part Mixed Choir (S.A.B.)

Ruth Krebbiel Jacobs says,

"This is without doubt the finest anthem collection for young voices that I have seen. There is not one number that is not eminently useful. The whole collection represents good taste and discrimination. I am only too happy to recommend it to the members of the Choristers' Guild—some 1500 youth choir directors."

Dr. Thor Johnson says,

"All fine! Please know of my heartiest approval of the excellent collection of three-part anthems selected by Roy Ringwald. It is a pleasure to write in its behalf."

Dr. Thor Johnson
Northwestern University
Moravian Music Festival

Dr. Federal Lee Whittlesey Says,

"Please accept my congratulations for the fine book and the novel and effective promotion. I am sure that this book of three-part anthems will have a wide use. As I go through the material I become increasingly aware that here is a book that will have an appeal not only to choirs of limited manpower, but also to large choirs. A tendency with some directors who have a full choir loft is to use too much involved material. I have always felt that worship is best implemented by simple things well done. I believe your book will be a boon to all directors who sense their responsibility as leaders in worship. Though we have a relatively large choir—80 voices—I intend to get PRAISE HIM, and I know we will use it with our adult choir as well as with our high school group."

Dr. Federal Lee Whittlesey, Minister of Music
Highland Park Methodist Church (Dallas)
Author: A Comprehensive Program of Church Music (Westminster Press)

PRAISE HIM is already in current use by choir directors in churches of virtually all denominations.

We have almost one thousand written reports from directors who have reviewed PRAISE HIM. They have found it tremendously valuable for Youth Choirs; Adult Choirs; for Teen-Agers and Adults combined.

In particular, we are pleased with the reports that such a large percentage of the 42 anthems is useful to all churches. Music seems to have a more unifying and uniting influence than much speechmaking.

Also, the response of the choir directors indicates that Roy Ringwald has achieved a rare combination of high musical and spiritual value and technical ease that makes PRAISE HIM both attractive to and singable by choirs of all sizes.

Try PRAISE HIM with your choir this summer, and you'll find it to have year 'round value.

If you have never seen PRAISE HIM, request a copy "on approval," using the coupon below. In addition to PRAISE HIM, we'll send you a demonstration recording of six of the anthems from this collection, at no charge. Your church and your loyal choir members deserve something special this summer. Review PRAISE HIM. We think you'll find it "just the thing."

Send the coupon now. Time is short.

DENVER TEMPLE WILL HAVE LARGE AUSTIN CONGREGATION EMANUEL

New Colorado Edifice of Contemporary Design to House Three-Manual Organ—Group Played Important Part in City's History

Austin Organs, Inc. is to install a large three-manual organ in the new building of contemporary architecture now under construction for Congregation Emanuel, Denver, Colo.

This congregation was originally founded in 1874 in the early days of Denver and celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary in 1949. The temple was destroyed by fire in 1897 and replaced by a new building in 1899. This structure, greatly enlarged in 1924, will be replaced by a new structure scheduled for completion in the spring of 1961.

Contract negotiations were handled by Charles L. Neill, Austin sales representative.

The stoplist was drawn up by Richard J. Piper, Austin's vice-president and tonal director. The instrument will have a movable console.

LUTHERANS IN MILWAUKEE HOLD 4TH HYMN FESTIVAL

The fourth annual hymn festival of Wisconsin Synod Lutheran churches in Milwaukee was held March 13, in the afternoon in the Siloah Church and in the evening at the Jordan Church. Two entirely different groups of about 300 choristers were present at each church. An overflow congregation of more than 700 attended each service. The Lutheran Chorale under the direction of the Rev. Kurt Eggert and seventeen church choirs were represented in the festival. Hildegarde Eggert was the organist.

EASTMAN TO HAVE FOURTH WORKSHOP FOR ORGANISTS

The Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, N.Y. will offer its fourth workshop for Protestant organists and directors July 18-22 at its summer session as part of a workshop for the church and synagogue musician. Participating in the program will be David Craighead, Dr. David Fetter and Dr. Allen McHose of the school's faculty, Dr. Eric Werner, Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, New York City and Dr. Murray Cayley, Rochester. Thomas Canning and Norman Peterson will also teach.

Mr. Craighead will play a recital July 19 and the Eastman chamber symphony orchestra will play under Dr. Frederick Fennell July 21.

Dr. Werner will talk on Forms and Functions of Liturgical Music, Dr. Fetter will discuss choral literature and Mr. Craighead will explore the organist's repertory and will talk on accompanying anthems, solos, duets and cantatas.

STANLEY SAXTON played a weekly series of recitals at Skidmore College in February and March covering organ literature from LeBegue to Hindemith and Andriessen.

A Matter of Time

By CHARLES PEAKER

They sing Handel more slowly now, in St. Paul's!

It all happened one Sunday night in January when a sleet-storm was knocking Toronto's telephone poles down like nine-pins and shrouding every tree in a glistening burial robe. The saints in the clerestory windows of St. Paul's shook to a blast which seemed to come straight from the Arctic, but inside the church evensong was going its inevitable, stately way, much as Archbishop Cranmer, dead these four hundred years, had ordered it.

The voluntaries, the introit and the anthem were all of them by Handel, which partially accounted for the large choir; the congregation, daunted by the storm, was small.

"Lighten our darkness . . . perils and dangers of this night!" intoned the Rev. Kenneth Scott melodiously, and after the Amen the choir arose to sing "Zadok the Priest."

"Zadok" was set by Handel in three main sections. The first chorus, grandly solemn, tells us that "Zadok the Priest and Nathan the Prophet anointed Solomon King." Now, in the second movement to a gay triple rhythm, the phrase "And all the people rejoiced" recurs at least eight times with increasing jubilation, when suddenly a ponderous cadence supervenes to the words "And said."

What did they say when David's son was set upon the throne? They said "God save the King, Long live the King, God save the King" in three mighty shouts which Handel set to the same musical phrase. There follows a pious but vain prayer "May the King live for ever" after which a magnificent series of amens and alleluias brings the piece to a close.

That night in St. Paul's, after the growing excitement of the introduction, the singers paid their tribute to Solomon nobly and moved into the second chorus both rejoiced and rejoicing until the thunderous "And said."

Here it was that a strange thing happened. "God save the King" struck in loud and fast, with the organist whipping it up with his left hand for all he was worth, but "Long live the King" faltered, and "God save the King" returned stately, solemn and much slower. The organist shrugged his shoulders and confined his attention to the accompaniment; clearly, someone behind him was conducting.

Mrs. Muggles, a very old lady in the congregation, saw it all. She said, "Somehow dearie, I was back in dear old London. What 'appened? Why, it was as plain as the nose on me face! A big man in a full-skirted coat and a wig walked up from the nave with a roll of music in his 'and and began to conduct 'em with it. There was an orchestra too, sawing away like mad. I don't know anything about music but I knows what I likes. Did he ever slow them up! I sits far forwards—me 'earing y'know—and I could see the organist sweating, pore soul, but the choir was fair singing their 'eads off. I turned around to see what the rest of them thought of these queer goings-on, and blimey if the church weren't full of people I never seen before, dressed like them old wax-works in Mme. Tussaud's y'know dearie."

The verger, a very intelligent man from Yorkshire, was in the back gallery monitoring the sound-system, "which suddenly" he said "went dead on me." He mused a moment and then went on, "Power shortage, I guessed, for the church had suddenly begun to grow dim and cold-like; must be this storm, I thought. Just then I took another look down and almost jumped out of me skin, the place was nearly full and I could see someone behind Dr. Peaker, conducting. I rubbed me eyes and blest if there weren't an orchestra too, smack in the middle of the chancel. Just then someone called "Way for His Majesty" and a silent procession came up the steps and into the vacant pews beside me. I didn't fancy it much. None of 'em seemed to see me, but I couldn't get out, short of jumping the balcony."

The organist told his story. "We came to the last chorus and I pressed the fifth general piston which brings out a lot of loud stops, but somehow most of them retired again, apparently by themselves. Well, you know the sort of thing that can happen to an instrument of this size, I just went on with a much quieter combination. What really shook me was the sudden reduction of speed. The choir was no longer looking at me, and I realized that someone behind me (someone who knew his business too) was conducting. Of course, I had no time to ask questions then, I just settled down to keeping up with the band and the singers. The band? Oh yes, there was a band all right—strings, wood, brass and timps, I should say."

We asked the Rector what caused him to change his subject so suddenly in the pulpit. Funny thing! He went up, started as usual with "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart" and so on, then looked around him and murmured something we could not catch. Here he paused a moment and in the deathly stillness we could hear the wind eddying around the church outside. Abruptly he straightened his shoulders and said, "I am changing my text; I give you some words from the Epistle to the Hebrews, 'Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses.'" For ten minutes, he preached boldly and well and presently the service was over.

We asked him about it later and the archdeacon said, "When I faced the nave, I was amazed to see a great crowd, and an unfamiliar one, before me. Also, in some strange way, the church looked unfamiliar too. I almost seemed to be back in the Abbey where I witnessed Her Majesty's Coronation."

"One minute" said the organist and turned to his book-shelves. "Ah, here we are; 'Zadok' was first performed in Westminster Abbey under the direction of Handel himself, when George the Second was crowned in 1727."

Our last witness was a big Irish policeman who said, "I was standing in front of the Manufacturers Life building trying to keep warm, when I saw the great doors of St. Paul's burst open, all three of them, earlier than usual." He flushed slightly and glanced at the archdeacon. "Out with a good deal of bowing and scraping from his attendants came a stout man in fancy dress, followed by a number of ladies and gentlemen—silk hats, crinolines, frock-coats—they paid no attention to the storm at all, at all! Suddenly—and may I be struck dead if I'm telling yez a word of a lie—Bloor Street was full of horses and carriages." He stopped, breathing heavily. "Did you hear anything?" asked the Rector.

"Faith and I did so" said the policeman. "A voice cried 'His Majesty' and a great golden coach rolled up to the steps, complete with postillions and out-riders. I stood frozen while someone called for Sir Robert . . . what was his name now?" He scratched his head.

"Could it have been Walpole?" said the organist.

"I declare to me sowl, it was" said the policeman, slapping his thigh. He resumed his story: "That was the end of it, the whole line of coaches floated east right through a streetcar and a red light, but I could still hear the trumpets faintly when they were gone in the storm."

There was a knock on the door of my study where we were discussing these events, and we all started. It was the conductor of the streetcar which we thought might be the one passing St. Paul's at about the time these singular things occurred, at least the T.T.C. seemed to think so. The conductor looked sullen and perhaps a trifle anxious. We quickly gathered that there had been nothing at all out of the way on that run, unless we considered it unusual for folk to "try it on" with transfers two hours old. Nothing here, it seemed, when suddenly he raised his head, and after a pause said, "Come to think of it, I stopped at the church—Sunday stop, you know—and when I started up again, a sleeping drunk who rides to the end of the line with me fairly regularly, jumped up and screamed at me to stop. We ground to a halt instantly and I turned to him roughly, about to push him back into his seat, when he said thickly, 'Look! look, man! you'll run 'em down!' Well, I looked and so did he, but all we saw was the swirl of the snow, and he grumbled an apology and shambled back to his seat to sleep again."

That seemed to be it. We arose to go. "One moment" said the archdeacon, "Mr. Davison, our head-usher at night, brought me something he saved out of the collection-plates." He searched his pockets fruitlessly, then finally grunted with satisfaction and produced a coin.

We peered at it in silence. It was a silver crown and on it, almost illegible, we could just discern the name "George the Second."

Al Fresco Events Featured at Detroit Convention

The informative and well-planned program booklet for the Detroit convention has long since reached every member of our national organization. We repeat the warning: "The only free copies are those received in the mail. Bring yours with you." Booklets will cost $1 at registration time.

Another quote: "Weather: usually very pleasant the last week in June." Meteorological co-operation will be a big boost for the many outdoor activities included. There are to be two lawn suppers: on the shores of Lake St. Clair at Christ Church, Grosse Pointe June 27 and at Christ Church Cranbrook June 29. A boat trip to Bob-Lo Island is planned for Wednesday morning and there will be conducted tours of the city, of an automobile factory and of Greenfield Village.

Four carillon recitals will be heard to their best advantage on surrounding lawns or grounds. Percival Price plays at the University of Michigan June 26, Wendell Westcott at Grosse Pointe Memorial Church June 28, Robert Donnell at Kirk-in-the-Hills June 30 and Frederick Marriott at Christ Church, Cranbrook the same day.

Bus transportation arranged for getting from one event to another will give additional opportunities for enjoying the out-of-doors.

Indoor entertainment of a non-musical sort will include a variety of events in the grand ballroom of the Statler-Hilton hotel: "Gemutlichkeit" Sunday evening, a reception Monday evening, "Full Swell with Crescendo" Wednesday, "Rendezvous" Thursday and the convention banquet Friday. Tuesday evening's special entertainment will be a theater party.

Robert Slusser's registration committee suggests making your registrations and your hotel registrations at once (pages 47 and 48 in the program booklet).

Toledo

The Toledo, Ohio Chapter met March 15 at St. Paul's Lutheran Church. The program was played by members of the Guild student group and provided chapter members with an opportunity to become acquainted with them. The students participating were Carolyn Siefke, Ruth Witker, Linda Fetzner, Sandra Wunder, Connie Swartz, Elaine Hummon and Ethel Heintz. A business meeting followed at which a discussion was held regarding the formation of study groups to aid in the preparation for Guild examinations. Refreshments were served.

Stanislaus

The Stanislaus County, Cal. Chapter met March 28 at the Beulah Covenant Church, Turlock to hear a recital by Esther Madsen. Miss Madsen played Chaconne, Couperin; Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Fairest Lord Jesus, Schroeder, and Sonata in D minor, Gullmunt. Following the recital the director of the junior choir festival, Glen Dawn, announced that fifteen choirs were to participate in the April 26 event at the First Methodist Church, Modesto.

SARA LUNDGREN

Los Angeles

The Los Angeles, Cal. Chapter met April 4 at the Church of St. Paul the Apostle for a dinner meeting. Guest speaker was Gerald H. Knight, Royal School of Church Music, England. Irene Robertson, Mus. D., FAGO, played numbers by Frescobaldi, d'Agincourt, Brahms, Reger, Bach, Tournemire and Simonds. A tour of the new church was conducted after the recital. It was announced that the April recitalists for the chapter's radio series were Dr. Orpha Ochse, E. Robert Kursinski, Anita Priest and William Reynolds.

ELFRIEDA DOLCE

Pasadena and Valley District

The Pasadena and Valley District, Cal. Chapter met for a dinner and concert meeting at the Holliston Avenue Methodist Church March 10. Past-dean Ron Huntington highlighted the dinner with a brief resumé of his recent trip around the world. Robert Finster, host organist, and the Occidental College Orchestra, under the direction of Lauris Jones, gave a concert. Mr. Finster's opening group consisted of Couperin's Offertoire sur les Grands Jeux; Franck's Chorale 2 in B minor, and Langlais' Epilogue on a Theme of Frescobaldi. After an intermission the orchestra gave a performance of Beethoven's Symphony 1. For the finale Mr. Finster and the orchestra joined in a performance of Dupré's Symphony in G minor for organ and orchestra.

GAYLORD CARTER

Salt Lake City

The Salt Lake City, Utah Chapter held a dinner meeting March 12 at the Aviation Club. Dean Max Hodges presided. At a short business meeting Vera Beason encouraged the chapter to have student organists enter the Utah Federation of Music Clubs contest. The feature of the evening was a film, Capturing the Wind, from the Wicks Organ Company shown by Melvin W. Dunn. This was followed by a short lecture discussion on organ maintenance and related problems.

FLORENCE S. ALLEN

Santa Barbara

The Santa Barbara, Cal. Chapter met Feb. 25 at the Pierpont Inn, Ventura. After the dinner the group went to the Community Church to inspect the murals, carved ceiling and the Casavant organ. The chapter then visited the chapel to listen to and view pictures of the organ with a talk given by William Orliusk. Host organist Mrs. Neumann invited the chapter to her home for refreshments.

C. HAROLD EINECKE

Orange Coast

Orange Coast Chapter members were guests of the Choral Conductors' Guild for a dinner meeting at the First Presbyterian Church, Santa Ana, Cal. After the dinner the choir sang several anthems under the direction of Robert Larson, host organist. A panel including Mr. Larson, Ruth Rockwood and a clergyman directed a discussion on the use of the organ in the worship service.

RUTH ARCHPILE

Southern Arizona

The Southern Arizona Chapter sponsored Catherine Crozier in recital March 23 at the Catalina Methodist Church, Tucson. Miss Crozier played Chaconne in D minor, Pachelbel; Concerto in F, Handel; Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Chorale in B minor, Franck; Deuxième Fantaisie, Alain, and Variations on a Noël, Dupré. A master class was held the following morning.

The chapter met at the Catalina Church March 14 for its monthly meeting with Marylyn Rinehart as host organist and Dean John McCoy presiding. A study and preview of Miss Crozier's recital numbers with various members taking part, comprised the program.

LIST TWELFTH WORKSHOP
AT ALABAMA U JULY 17-20

The twelfth annual church music workshop will be held on the campus of the University of Alabama July 17-20. The workshop is sponsored jointly by the University of Alabama and the Alabama Federation of Music Clubs. Regular classes will be held during the morning hours in choral repertory and technique, elementary organ, problems of the unskilled choir, organ repertory and registration for the larger choirs and the morning sessions will end with a youth choir rehearsal directed by Dr. William Lemonds, Kansas City, Mo.

The afternoons will be devoted to denominational conferences, sessions on vocal repertory and seasonal choir music. For the first time a youth choir workshop will be under the direction of Dr. Lemonds with the assistance of state choir leaders.

William Teague, Shreveport, La. will conduct organ classes and give a recital on the new Möller organ in the First Baptist Church. The conference will open with a recital on the new Schlicker organ in Cadek Hall, University of Alabama, by Edward Tibbs, Howard College, Birmingham.

THE BOND chapel choir of the University of Chicago will sing this season's last concert May 8 with Richard Vikstrom conducting the choir, soloists and members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Suggestions Grow from Successful Junior Festival

By ROBERT SUTHERLAND LORD

The moving beauty of the strains of Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" echoed through the lofty spaces of the Edgewood Congregational Church, New Haven, Conn. The church was filled by a capacity audience moved by the magnificence of 500 children's voices singing a masterpiece of Bach's art. Here was tangible evidence that the minds and voices of children can be led in the nurture of the best in sacred music and that a genuine spiritual experience will result. These were young people learning that there is no room for compromise in the worship of the Almighty. Only the greatest and the best is worthy of the praise of God.

This event was the third annual junior choir festival in the New Haven area sponsored by the New Haven council of churches. The number of singers and the number of participating churches have doubled in the three years. It is now one of the council's most important activities.

When I was approached about participation in the first festival, I was reminded of an excellent talk which Canon West of the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine, New York City, made to a pastor-organist banquet sponsored by an AGO chapter. A point which stayed with me concerned the urgent importance of proper instruction for children in good religious music. This instruction included the selection of hymns sung in the Sunday School as well as the choice of anthems studied in the junior choir. Only through the cultivation of youthful tastes of today can the church look optimistically to the future and an improved musical climate within the worship service. The junior choir festival should serve as an instrument toward this greater goal. A professional church musician could be of great assistance in providing the musical knowledge necessary for the artistic development of the festival.

I have not changed my point of view as to the importance of the music selected for performance by the combined choirs. Its importance reaches far beyond momentary considerations as to whether the children will like the music, whether the numbers are in most church libraries or whether it requires much more work to learn. The selection of music must meet the aim of education of young minds to the higher purposes of sacred music. If junior choir directors and especially the director of the festival overlook or compromise this main objective, a large festival may tend to resemble a circus with a group of side shows rather than a sublime spiritual experience achieved through music. And in our haste to emphasize the importance of such an experience to the children, let us not forget that the listening audience will also benefit from and participate in this experience.

To New Haven, the junior choir festival is a new and very successful venture. It has been accepted by the community and supported through their attendance at the event. We realize that many festivals are conducted in different and very adequate fashions. However, we would like to show how our festival was organized and share our experience with other festival leaders in the hopes of stimulating new interest in areas where the idea is new.

The Job of Organizing

As the idea for the festival may come from either within an AGO chapter, the council of churches or some other interested musical circle, it is necessary that both the choir directors and the sponsoring organization come into close co-operation from the start. Any program such as this has a musical and a spiritual side and both should be brought into harmony for ultimate success in the venture. The council, upon securing the services of someone who will direct the festival music, then must begin the task of accumulating a list of junior choir directors. Local councils of churches, AGO chapters, and even the telephone book provide information concerning the churches in an area.

These churches should be approached immediately for information concerning interest in the project and the name of the choir director. It will probably save much time and money in the long run if this survey is carried out by phone. This will provide an opportunity for the festival director to do a little "saleswork" on other directors and to evaluate their reaction to the project. On the basis of this solicitation, a steering committee should be appointed by the director of the festival to assist with the formulation of policies for the festival and to discuss the potential interest in the festival within the community.

After the list of directors is compiled it should be carefully preserved and kept up to date. The second festival director will then have an easy job the following year. It should be pointed out that churches without junior choirs should be informed of the festival and ministers should encourage representatives to attend the festival. This will undoubtedly result in the organization of new junior choirs in the area.

Junior choir directors are an interesting group of people; they deserve the recognition which the festival brings to them. Many have other jobs—sometimes full time positions. Some have had extensive musical training, others very little. In addition to professional ministers of music, school teachers, saleswomen, music supervisors in schools, university professors, university students, parents, students' wives, nurses and others share the common interest in the singing of the children. Because of the wide activities of our directors, we have had to keep all committee work to a minimum. This year the entire festival was organized by a steering committee at only one meeting! The telephone served as the means for the rest of the pre-festival planning. More meetings may be required the first year of organization.

Topics for Discussion

What matters should be discussed and decided upon at a directors' steering committee? This meeting should be called about four months in advance of the time of the festival. It is an excellent way to stimulate the interest of the children at times when their minds begin to wander—the post-Easter drop in interest, for example.

The time and place of the festival are the first items of business. There should be a fair indication by the time the committee meeting is held of the number of churches participating or at least interested. A large church with an adequate chancel will provide the best religious setting. For the success of the festival, it is necessary to stimulate the interest of the organist at the festival church if he is to perform.

The second item is the selection of anthems for the combined choirs to sing. All directors can be advised to bring copies of anthems they feel good for the festival. The assistance of at least one qualified or professional church musician is essential at this point. His greater knowledge of the available material will be invaluable. He can distinguish which numbers would have the greatest musical worth and which anthems would sound well when sung by a large group. At the committee meeting, anthems can be studied by the directors. After the selection of the music, the myriad of details concerning regulations for the festival must be worked out. These include rehearsal dates, time for choirs to assemble on festival day, when and where choirs are to be robed, possible festival photographs and recording, memorization of music to be required or not, invitations for participating clergymen, the order for the vesper service and the selection of the festival organist.

The festival in New Haven was organized with a combination of three group anthems and nine separate anthems by individual choirs. Directors have told me that the children enjoy seeing and hearing other groups of similar size perform. It allows for a choice of anthems by various directors. Participating groups work very hard to fulfill their part in the program. Festivals in other communities have been very successful in working out an entire program around anthems which the entire group sings. This is a matter for the choir directors to decide for themselves.

Four important projects must be carried out after the directors have met. These may be assigned to various directors. The first is to send a mimeographed letter containing the results of the steering committee meeting to all the junior choir directors. The office staff of one of the local churches undoubtedly would offer assistance in this matter. This letter, if well-organized, need be the only piece of mail to go out before the festival. Needless to say, this saves money and time. A careful summary of all festival details and an accurate list of anthems for the choirs to purchase should be included. This information must be compiled with publisher's names, exact titles and if possible catalog numbers. Any special instructions on the rendition of the anthems should be included. For instance, we advised the purchase of the standard four-part version of "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" because we felt it was a valuable addition to a choir library, but the anthem was to be sung in unison for the festival. Be sure that the name and phone number of the festival director is included in the letter in order to answer any questions directors may have. If your committee decides to have individual choir anthems, the number of anthems selected and the method of choice of church groups should be decided. A deadline should be given for all individual entries and a copy of the music should be sent to the festival director for the use of the festival organist.

The second project to be carried out concerns the ordering of festival music. If a music store in your area specializes in choir music, they will gladly canvas the junior choir directors. This will expedite the ordering of the music and will guarantee better service for all the choirs. Usually, a discount is granted on such orders. The music store will report to the festival director on the number of churches actually ordering the music. This is an excellent barometer of the number of churches intending to participate.

The third project concerns the setting up of the vesper service. The best arrangement of numbers requires much thought. Our group numbers were placed at the beginning, in the middle and at the end of the service. Assistance for the form of the service can be obtained from those ministers invited to participate. The words for the hymns should be printed in the bulletin if possible, so there will be no need for the singers to carry hymnals. Arrangements should be made with the festival organist to include his prelude and postlude music in the bulletin. If the bulletin is printed, the proof should be returned to the printer after the last rehearsal if this is possible. This will take care of any last minute changes.

The last project comprises the publicity for the festival. The sponsoring organizations can be very helpful. They usually have their own public relations channels and press releases will appear in the newspapers sooner this way. In any press release, names of the committee members, names of participants and any others involved in planning should be included. Each church should publicize the fact that its choir is participating and invite the support of the congregation.

The festival director will plan for the festival rehearsal which should be scheduled about a week before the festival. This gives all groups more time to work on the music and to instruct choirs on the last minute details of the festival. The director can begin this rehearsal by warming up the group on the hymns to be sung at the festival. Then group numbers should be rehearsed along with any responses which the combined choirs may sing. All special instructions for the festival should then be given. After the main group is dismissed, all individual anthems should then be rehearsed in the order of their appearance.

A rehearsal immediately before the service itself should be devoted to details of the service and the problem of seating. Our experience has been that the extra chairs are never in place until the day of the festival. Therefore, it is necessary to organize the seating of all groups and to give instruction on the processional and the recessional. We needed three separate processions to bring all the singers into the church. Each singer was given a card with a number on it. The color of the card indicated the processional line and the number, the place within that line. The recessional is usually in a different order. This can actually be rehearsed by leaving the church at the conclusion of the rehearsal in the correct processional order. Extra help will be needed to supervise each procession. Junior choir directors processed immediately behind their singers and were responsible for lining up their own children. The time required for such a rehearsal before the actual festival is forty minutes. Therefore, choirs should be asked to assemble fifteen minutes before the director intends to begin the rehearsal.

A final detail of the last rehearsal concerns the distribution of a short questionnaire to all choir leaders. It can be distributed by one of the choir mothers. This information sheet should ask whether the director intends to continue as a choral leader the following year. If not, the name of the successor should be requested. This will provide information for the directors' list. Suggestions for improvements can be solicited along with reactions to the festival. With all heads working together and all ideas still fresh, many good comments will result. Be sure to ask for volunteers for the steering committees for the next year.

After the festival is over, the director should assemble a file of all mimeographed materials, expense sheets, several copies of the festival service, and should summarize how and when things were done. If the directorship changes the following year, there will be a guide for organizing the next festival.

HUGH PORTERS HEAD GUEST FACULTY AT WISCONSIN U

The University of Wisconsin summer session, the school of music and the extension music department will jointly sponsor the annual church music conference July 27-29 on the Madison campus.

Visiting faculty will include Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Porter, Union Seminary school of sacred music, and Lauretta R. Cotton, Milwaukee. Other faculty members include Samuel T. Burns, Bettina Bjorksten, Dale Gilbert, Paul Jones, J. Russell Paxton and John Harvey of the university school of music as well as Dr. Orville Shetney and Dr. Warren Woolbridge.

The program will include several sessions on hymnody, study of new publications for choir, solo voice and organ and several concerts and recitals, among them handbell and carillon recitals.

NEW SERVICE BY DIRKSEN SUNG ON EASTER TELECAST

A Festival Service in E by Richard Dirksen, associate organist and choir-master, was sung for the first time in the Washington Cathedral's Easter festival service. The work, composed especially for this celebration of Holy Communion on Easter is scored for two trumpets, two trombones, timpani, organ, mixed chorus and soprano solo. The service was heard nationally on the CBS-TV network.

SOME THINGS NEVER CHANGE - #2

Another of the things that never changes is the need for devoted loyalty. With all of the up-to-date equipment and techniques in the world, a company stands still unless it can count on such people as Grace Gettings, pictured here at her desk. She has worked with three generations of the Schantz family, keeping track of the income and outgo. She and our other skilled associates help us live up to the Schantz tradition of building fine pipe organs.

CHICAGO, MAY 1, 1960

High Praise? Hardly!

We had a letter recently from the impresario of a concert series in one of our leading centers of culture. In outlining some of his plans he included several of his findings or opinions which are startling enough to compel us to serve them up on our editorial platter.

"I am quite firmly convinced," he writes, "that most organists have no interest in music whatsoever." The two danger words are, we feel, "most" and "no" but before we dismiss this man as outrageous let's do some quiet personal research.
Here are some questions for you to ask yourself: How many organists in your community support financially and by their attendance even the professional recitals, operas or symphony concerts available by subscription? How often are they to be found at worthwhile student or amateur performances of other than organ or choral music? How many serve on the boards of local concert organizations and how much of their time do they give?
How do you fit into these pictures?

We wish we could make a categorical denial of even this man's statement that "organists make up the smallest part of organ recital audiences." Figures from the ticket chairman of our staff's home chapter, we blush to admit, indicate that support for this man's statement is greater than for the chapter's subscription series.
If each member had bought at least one series ticket no outside ticket sales would have been needed to balance the budget.
Yet if the series had depended entirely on the patronage of its members it would have been a bankrupting venture. But hifi addicts, listeners to "good music" radio stations, general college students and just plain old-fashioned "music lovers" rallied to the musical battle cry and formed a much larger part of the audience than organists. Which would have been as it should be if the chapter had been more than thirty-five per cent represented in the subscription sales.

It is time we took a little inventory in our own secret cultural store room. Maybe all of us aren't keeping our stock replenished and in good condition. If that is so, perhaps we deserve to be subjected to some shocking opinions now and then.

Watch This Space!

By now most of us have completed our plans for spending a busy and interesting week at Detroit toward the end of June.
Certainly no reader of THE DIAPASON was in the dark about this meeting even before the convention booklets were mailed in March.

But so far we have had little to say about the RCCO convention planned for two beautiful cities in British Columbia—Vancouver and Victoria—for the week beginning Aug. 15. We have seemed to tease our readers about this with a kind of "watch-this-space" technique. The truth is that we have so far received very little tangible detail from the convention's high command and are ourselves eagerly awaiting more detail.

Statesiders who have attended recent RCCO conventions are already aware of fascinating differences in the way our northern friends stage a convention. The convenient time of the summer, the opportunity to see some of our continent's most spectacular scenery and closer acquaintance with Canadians living in a distant province all add reasons for including this meeting in your summer plans if you possibly can.

"Watch this space!" is still our slogan for the RCCO convention. By the June issue we hope that we can "tell all."

Maypole Dance

From time immemorial early May has been a time for festivals, dancing about the maypole, crowning the May Queen and other such appropriate ways of welcoming the most delightful time of the year.

Hardly a generation ago great music festivals welcomed May with huge massed choruses and special excursion rates on the railroads, and on a local level with proud papas and mamas watching offspring perform and hoping for the best.

But Maypole dancing has been relegated now to the folk dance groups and May baskets which used to hang from many a cottage door would look rather forlorn drooping from the knocker of apartment 7-F.

Still, the National Federation of Music Clubs and associated organizations do have firm roots in tradition for their choice of the first week in May as National Music Week and we salute them in their efforts to continue a fine practice. In these days, when violent change and populations on the move have altered our whole conception of community living, the Federation's kind of sponsorship gives us a nice sense of continuity somehow. So:
"Wake me early, Mother dear,"
It's National Music Week.

Family Resemblance

We always enjoy reading the official reports of the Royal College of Organists in The Musical Times. It strikes us that these statements by the English organization very often parallel those we receive from our own headquarters.

For example: in the AGO examiners' report we read: "the playing of the prepared pieces was for the most part adequate." The RCO put it this way: "The general standard of playing was competent and showed careful preparation of pieces." Mr. Wyton's committee found that "many candidates foundered on the musicianship tests" while Melville Cook's committee found that "the tests were poorly executed."

On the paper work, the AGO report

Improvisation

Cleveland, Ohio, March 19, 1960—

Dear Sir:

Improvisation in this country is not a lost art; frankly it has never been discovered.
The average organist does not know where to begin in this important phase of his equipment. Our music schools have not stressed this intriguing facet to any measurable degree.

Foreign organists have a definite edge on Americans: their schools specialize in extempore playing in the early stages of their study.

At the AGO convention at Oberlin in 1920
Dr. Frederick Schlieder actually demonstrated, not just talked about, his theory of originality and amazed a group around the console by his versatility in creative playing.
In recent conventions . . . theory, harmony and other music studies were thoroughly discussed but actual demonstration of extempore on-the-spot playing was neglected.

I remember the facile originality of organists like Widor, Bonnet, Dupré and recently Richter and Marchal who carried their talent to the limit.

Certainly American music schools can learn from the French and German in developing this forgotten art. Or is this something which is inherited and which cannot be taught?

Boy Sopranos

Washington, D.C., March 25, 1960—

Dear Sir:

The traditional cathedral choir boy with a properly trained voice to sing the soprano part, using his fluty "head-tone", is said by many experts to produce the most beautiful tone possible with the human voice. For religious purposes such boy sopranos are very desirable in many churches because of the unemotional character of their voices.

The proper training of such voices is said to be almost a lost art outside of the cathedrals and few persons are sufficiently qualified to train them unless they have had cathedral training themselves or have had it passed down to them by cathedral choirmasters.

There appears to be a slight tendency toward the return of the boy sopranos especially in the liturgical churches and the writer would appreciate comments regarding the desirability in general of the boy soprano with the properly trained head-tone voice.

THOMAS APFLEBY

P.S. to Herman Schlicker!

Albany, Tex., April 4, 1960

Dear Sir:

At the risk of appearing to be quibbling, may I repeat what several have said before me? Inasmuch as organs capable of being carried while played by a person in the same way as a piano-acordion (pumped with the left hand and played with the right) have for centuries been known as portatits, why can't we call instruments like the interesting Schlicker mentioned in THE DIAPASON for March 1 portable organs? The Schlicker is, I believe, a portable positiv.

Sincerely,

JOSEPH E. BLANTON

ELLSASSER SOLOIST, JUDGE
FOR TRI-STATE FESTIVAL

Richard Ellsasser will be featured soloist at the twenty-eighth tri-state music festival at Enid, Okla., beginning May 2.
More than 12,000 students from 142 schools in ten states are expected to attend the week-long convale.

Mr. Ellsasser will lead two master classes the opening day and will spend the following three days judging keyboard contestants. He will be guest soloist in three performances with combined bands and choirs.

says "The answers to questions on history, choir training, form and organ construction . . . were encouraging." In Britain "the history questions were usually well answered although several candidates made surprising misquotations or wasted time in introducing irrelevant matter."

We felt that the parallels here in examinations taken the same season were remarkable. We would like to see a detailed comparison of the examinations themselves some time. We believe it might show that our adaptations to the specific problems of American church musicians were anything but a softening process.

Looking Back into the Past

Fifty years ago the following news was reported in the issue of May 1, 1950—

A recital by Albert Dee to dedicate the Pilcher organ at St. Mary's College,
Dallas, Tex. listed the following: Largo,
Handel; Andante Religioso, Guilman; Larghetto, Lemaigre; The Erl King,
Schubert-Liszt; Priere Angelique, Guilmant; The Lost Chord, Sullivan (by request); Traumerei and Romance, Schumann; Sathanas, Dee; Intermezzo, Cava-leria Rusticana, Mascagni, and Grande Sortie, Best.

An "endless chain" society was organized for the purpose of raising funds for a new organ at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Aberdeen, Wash.

The new AGO chapter in Detroit sponsored its first organ recital April 26;
John L. Edwards played in St. John's Episcopal Church assisted by Charles L.
Cloherty, bass.

Charles Walker, Brooklyn, N.Y., organist, suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of overwork in the Lenten season.

Twenty-five years ago these occurrences were recorded in the May 1, 1935 issue—

Death within a month removed Edwin Stanley Seder, Chicago area, Edgar Priest,
Washington, D.C. and Walter F. Skeele,
Los Angeles.

John A. Bell, veteran Pittsburgh, Pa.
organist and his wife were killed in an automobile accident.

Elaborate plans were made for a festival at New York's Riverside Church in honor of Clarence Dickinson with a chorus of 1200 singing his works.

Charles Marie Widor was pictured pinning the decoration of Officer of the Legion of Honor on Marcel Dupré at a banquet in Paris.

George William Volkel played the American premiere of Jongen's Symphonie Concertante with the National Orchestral Association in New York's Carnegie Hall April 2 with Leon Barzin conducting.

Ten years ago the following events were published in the issue of May 1, 1950—

Carl Weinrich was appointed visiting lecturer in music at Harvard University.

Stoplists printed included: Three-manual Casavant, University of Alberta, Edmonton; three-manual Kilgen, Franciscan Convent Chapel, Mishawaka, Ind.;
three-manual Reuter, Ottawa Street Methodist Church, Joliet, Ill.; three-manual Standaart, Ginter Park Baptist, Richmond, Va.

Clarence Watters, David Fuller, William Self, Fenner Douglas and George Faxon played recitals on a series heard at both the Worcester, Mass. art museum and Trinity Church, Hartford, Conn.

NAFOMM WILL HOLD FIVE REGIONAL INSTITUTES

The National Fellowship of Methodist Musicians will hold five regional institutes in July and August in co-operation with the denomination's general board of education.

The South Central institute July 4-7 at Mount Sequoyia, Ark. will include on its staff: Robert Scoggin, Fred Haley, Carleton Young, Meredith Cravens, Edna Earle Massey and Dr. and Mrs. Bliss Wiant.

The North Central institute July 10-15 at De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind. will include: Robert Burns, William Kugel, William Ballard, Rexford Keller, Austin Lovelace, George Pool, Mr. Young and the Wiantes.

The Western Institute July 25-29 at the College of Puget Sound, Tacoma, Wash. will be part of an inter-denominational workshop.

The Southeastern institute July 31-Aug.
5 will include: Caleb Cushing, Walter Ball, Mr. Young, Holmes Ambrose, William A. Hoppe and Glenn Draper.

The Northeastern institute Aug. 15-20
at Lycoming College, Williamsport, Pa. will include: William K. Burns, Mr.
Young, Philip Dieterich and Julius Carroll.

University Groups Heard in Choral Concert

One of those festival concerts which at their best are very exciting fare was staged April 10 at the First Methodist Church, Evanston, Ill. Austin Lovelace's chancel choir from the church was joined for the occasion by the women's glee club, the a cappella choir and the chamber and symphony orchestras of Northwestern University—some 160 voices and eighty-odd instruments. William Ballard conducted and Dr. Lovelace was at the organ.

The program offered three widely contrasted works all of which are comparatively unhackneyed. Certainly Bach's Cantata 182 is not sung to death and the size and style of the choir was kept here to smaller proportions; the young soloists sounded fresh and appropriate.

Dohnanyi's Stabat Mater was new to us. The women's glee club sang antiphonally on this and made some very good sounds against the orchestra in this uneven but often moving work.

The whole aggregation joined for Holst's Hymn of Jesus which most of a capacity audience, including this writer and his party, found very stimulating. We were grateful for some unusual music so well sung and played that even at the end of Palm Sunday it could excite and satisfy.

HEWLETT HEADS WORKSHOP FOR MILWAUKEE DIOCESE

A workshop for Episcopal clergy and church musicians will be conducted at All Saints Church, Milwaukee, Wis. May 14. David Hewlett, Church of the Resurrection, New York City will be guest speaker. He will be assisted by members of the commission on church music of the diocese of Milwaukee: the Rev. H. Kilworth Maybury, the Rev. Robert Jaques, Dr. Lucien Caillett, Richard Crane, Mrs. William Miles and Mrs. John Stillman. Topics will include the use of the hymnal and music for the small choir and organ.

CONFERENCE AT MONTREAT SCHEDULED FOR JULY 9 - 13

The fifth annual conference on church music sponsored by the board of Christian education of the Presbyterian Church, U.S. will be held July 9 - 13 at Montreat, N.C. On the music staff will be Vernon de Tar, FAGO, New York City, organ technique and repertoire; Donald Ketting, DMus, Pittsburgh, Pa., choral organization; Earl F. Berg, Charlotte, N.C., adult choirs; Mabel Boyter, Atlanta, Ga., children's choirs; James R. Sydnor, SMD, Richmond, Va., hymnology and music in Christian education; Richard M. Peek, Charlotte, choral and organ repertoire; James Hart, Winston-Salem, youth choirs; Haskell Boyter, Atlanta, voice class and music for radio and TV; Stephen Ortlip, Lookout Mountain, N.C., choral technique and repertoire; Betty L. Peek, Charlotte, bell choirs, and Wyatt Insko, Richmond, organ construction and design. A series of evening concerts, lectures and panel discussions is scheduled and there will be opportunities for use of the recreational facilities.

FESTIVAL IN LOUISIANA FEATURES VARIED MUSIC

The seventeenth festival of contemporary music at Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge coincided March 20 and 27 and April 3, 10, 19 and 24 with the university centennial. Among works heard in this journal's fields of interest were: Petrassi's Quattro Inni Sacri with Newton Alsop, tenor and Mattie Lee Pate, organ; the Poulenc Concerto with Lewis Brewer at the organ and Robert C. Collins conducting the string ensemble; Claude Almand's The Resurrection Story with chorus, soloists and orchestra conducted by Dallas Draper and with George Walter at the organ, and Harald Genzmer's Sonata and Ginastera's Toccata, Villancico y Fuga with John Adams at the organ.

KONRAD SCHUBA, organist of the Cathedral of Konstantz, Germany, who was pictured along with the famed edifice and its organ in THE DIAPASON for November 1957, was married April 9 to Anita Richter.

GRAD STUDENTS CONDUCT BACH PASSION AT UNION

Eight graduate students at the school of sacred music of Union Theological Seminary conducted a reading of Bach's St. John Passion as a culmination of two months of analysis in the classes of Julius Herford, Sergius Kagen, and Earl Berg. A chamber orchestra of students from the seminary and the Juilliard school of music accompanied the chorus. The audience participated by singing the chorales and the final chorus.

A Little More News about Vancouver and Victoria Comes

Preliminary announcements on the RCCO convention at Vancouver and Victoria, B.C. Aug. 15 - 19 do not give us names of the featured players and speakers as yet but we should have them for June. We know that the special train (more on that later!) will reach Vancouver the morning of Aug. 15 and registration and a council meeting will precede a reception. Among things so far announced are the College service on Monday and a whole procession of enticing meals including a picnic lunch climaxing an extensive sight-seeing tour, a Chinese dinner and several formal meals.

Thursday morning the delegates will take the boat to Victoria for the remainder of the convention.

There will be a number of recitals and lectures in both cities but special emphasis will be put on the beauties of the landscape and the schedule is to be kept loose enough for all the visitors to enjoy them to the fullest.

Hamilton

The Hamilton Centre was invited to attend the Sabbath evening services March 25 at Temple Anshe Shalom. The choir, organ and cantor were used in this reformed or liberal congregation in much the same way as in some Protestant churches. The service was said and sung in both English and Hebrew. At this synagogue the custom is to meet in another room after the service for fellowship and food. Following this Rabbi Bernard Baskin invited members to the sanctuary for a discussion of the Jewish faith.

HOWARD W. JEROME

MAGNIFICAT AT CALGARY

A capacity audience heard members of the Calgary Centre perform Bach's Magnificat March 8 in the Central United Church. Several well-known Calgary singers assisted. The choir and orchestra were under the direction of Cyril S. Mossop and Eric McKay was at the organ.

On the same program were Handel's F major Concerto, Corelli's Trio Sonata opus 3 in D major and Mozart's Epistle Sonata 4, K 144, with John Seachfield and Robert Bell doubling as organist and conductor.

Eileen Hooper sang arias from Bach Cantatas 147 and 53 with Robert Hooper at the organ.

OLIVE L. MOON

Toronto

The Toronto Centre met March 21 at the new Woodgreen United Church for an organ and choral program. The host organist Frederick Geoghegan was heard on the new three-manual Casavant organ, in a performance of Handel's Organ Concerto 2 and the Psalm 94 Sonata, Reubke. The Coventry Singers, Peterborough, conducted by Mrs. William Piercy, provided the cappella contributions. Their selections included Bach's Jesu, Joy and Treasure; Jesus and the Traders, Kodaly; two madrigals of John Bennet; five folk songs arranged by Brahms, and varied secular pieces. Following the program there was a social hour at which time members took advantage of the opportunity to inspect the new church.

JOHN DEDRICK

Peterborough

The March 5 meeting of the Peterborough Centre was held at St. James' United Church. Secretary Rita Carlson conducted the business meeting in the absence of Chairman Gordon Fleming. A panel discussion was based on questions submitted by members including "Is music really necessary to the church service?", "Does popularization of a sacred piece of music make it unacceptable to the church service?" and "What should we allow and what should we promote in wedding music?" Moderator of the panel was Canon R. P. Walker and panel members were Mrs. F. Turner, B. Perry, H. Northrop and J. Harris. C. Allen thanked the moderator and the panel and Mrs. Carlson introduced two new members. Refreshments followed.

W. E. DOWNES

London

The London Centre met March 6 at the Trinity United Church. Host organist Peter Hall gave a demonstration of the possibilities of the electronic instrument and T. C. Chattoe showed pictures of his European trip. Mr. Hall played Little Prelude and Fugue in D minor, Lord For Thee My Spirit Longs and In Death's Strong Grasp the Saviour Lay, Bach; Berceuse, Vierne; Ecce jam Noctis, Edmundson; Seelenbrautigam, Blackburn; Trumpet Tune in D major, Purcell; Psalm 19, Marcello. Mr. Chattoe announced at the business meeting that a choral workshop for junior voices was to be held March 30 at the Trinity United Church with Earle Terry Conducting.

The centre and the music department of the board of education sponsored a workshop for junior voices in church and school March 30 at the Trinity United Church under the direction of Earle Terry. The session throughout the day dealt with rehearsal and vocal technique, tone, diction, rhythm, phrasing, intonation, interpretation, repertoire and vocal problems. A demonstration choir of fifty voices ranging from seven to twelve years of age assisted in the sessions. The information obtained was not just applicable to the training of junior voices but to adults as well. A collection was taken to start a fund for future workshops of perhaps a more extensive nature under Mr. Terry's guiding hand. Peter Hall, host organist, was chairman of the workshop committee.

MARGARET NEEDHAM

Oshawa and District

The Oshawa and District Centre held a general meeting at the home of Mrs. G. K. Drynan March 22 to choose hymns for the coming hymn festival. This proved to be an interesting evening with comparisons of hymns sung in the various churches represented. From the many favorite hymns enthusiastically supported by members, ten were chosen.

The centre sponsored an organ and choral recital by Alan Reesor and his choir at St. George's Anglican Church March 20. Mr. Reesor played numbers by Walther, Willan, Marcello, Buxtehude, Dupré, Sowerby, Peeters, Britten and Donato. The choir sang an a cappella group of Deliver Us, O Lord, Batten; Come, I Pray Thee, Anderson, and Go Not Far, Zingarelli. Mr. Reesor ended the recital with Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor. Proceeds of the recital were sent to the RCCO Headquarter's Building Fund.

MARGARET DRYNAN

Owen Sound Branch

The March 20 meeting of the Owen Sound Branch was held in the Division Street United Church. Mrs. E. M. Dillon arranged the musical program. J. G. McGregor played viola selections by Beethoven, Schumann and Corelli and Patsy Mahood sang Music When Soft Voices Die, Willan, with Mrs. Dillon at the piano. Group singing followed with Mrs. Dillon, Philip LaMarche and Victor Kerslake playing the accompaniments. Gordon Tucker gave an account of some interesting experiences of his career. Refreshments were served with Mrs. J. Waines and Mrs. E. Beckett assisting Mrs. Dillon.

RETA MARSHALL

Montreal

The March 26 meeting of the Montreal Centre was held in the Church of the Advent, Westmount, when Thomas Gablenz gave an informative talk on Organs of Two Islands. His material was gathered in the course of recent visits to the Azores and the Dominican Republic. Information regarding builders and dates of installation and much technical detail was supplied to members in leaflet form. Colored slides illustrated the talk together with some recordings of Spanish and Portuguese organs by E. Power Biggs. Gratitude of all present was expressed by Phillips Motley. A short business meeting preceded the talk.

DAVID T. BROWN

St. Catharines

The St. Catharines Centre met March 20 in the First United Church where Eric Dowling, FCCO, played a recital. His program: Voluntary in A minor, Boyce; Air in D minor, Stanley; Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Chorale in A minor, Franck; Madrigal and Cortège, Vierne; Elves, Bonnet; Carillon Sortie, Mulet. Jessie Horne sang Hear Ye Israel, Mendelssohn, and How Shall I Sing That Majesty, Pointer.

GORDON KAY

THE SANTA BARBARA choral society, directed by C. Harold Einecke, sang portions of Bach's Mass in B minor April 5 at the City College. The same group will sing the West Coast premiere May 24 of the Hovhannes Magnificat at the Lobero theater directed by Dr. Erno Daniel.

CHARLES ORE completed Easter Sunday a series of thirty weekly radio broadcast over station KFMG-FM, Lincoln Neb. His hour programs embracing music of the Lutheran heritage were taped on organs throughout Nebraska.

RCCO Exams Not Designed for "Average"

By ERIC DOWLING

One of the main reasons for the founding of what is now the Royal Canadian College of Organists was to provide a system of examinations for church musicians in the hope that aspiring organists and choirmasters would use the requirements as a guide to a course of study which would equip them for a vocation demanding a great deal of musical training.

While it is impossible to devise an examination system which would be comprehensive enough to test all the abilities desirable in an ideal organist and choir director, it is true that academically the examination requirements indicate all the necessary facets of a musical education which should be included in the training of anyone desirous of becoming a competent church musician.

While it is true that many fine musicians have never sat for an examination and therefore hold no diplomas or degrees, it is also true that the standards of examinations established by educational institutions in any field of endeavor indicate the level of competence for all who graduate. A frequent criticism of the College examinations is that the required standard is too high for the average person. This may or may not be correct, but the College is not interested in granting diplomas to average musicians but is concerned about the capabilities of those to whom diplomas are granted. It is the only course which can be followed if competent church musicians are to be developed and the standard of church music raised to its acceptable level.

The two "grades" of examinations are, of course, Associateship and Fellowship. The Associateship provides the groundwork for the development of musicianship while the Fellowship demands that a high standard of musicianship be attained. Another way to compare these examinations would be to say that this is where "we separate the men from the boys." It is unfortunate that so many people view the Associateship diploma as the ultimate in attainment while it is only a stepping stone on the way to maturity in the Fellowship diploma. The writer would make an appeal to all who hold Associate diplomas to continue their studies toward the Fellowship exam, for it is only in this way that the College can fulfill its destiny.

At the present time in Canada the demand for competent church musicians exceeds the supply, for this is evident in the fact that there are important churches unable to secure an efficient organist-director.

It must be remembered that the requirements for any examination do not determine the standard, for this is largely determined by the system of marking and by the examiners who must know the standard expected by the College.

The system of marking does not allow a weakness in any division of the exam: e.g. if any two of the keyboard tests are below a fifty per cent mark a supplementary examination in tests must be passed at a subsequent session. Through the examiner's report the candidate is made aware of his shortcomings and can then concentrate on overcoming them.

The panel of examiners is comprised of a group of efficient musicians who are seriously interested in doing a good job of examining. Periodically, meetings for examiners are arranged and a "specimen" examination is conducted; this gives each individual examiner the opportunity of comparing his marking standard with other members of the panel and of discussing openly any phase of the examination where any doubt exists. It is also in this way that a continuity of standard is secured from year to year.

In conclusion it should be stated that in the fiftieth anniversary year there was almost a record in the number of candidates for the examinations and this is a good omen for the future. It is sad that some were not successful this time but there are opportunities in the future to strengthen and overcome such weaknesses as were evident in the exam and to those who did not secure the required marks to pass I would say that there is no failure until all endeavor ceases.

From a musical standpoint, the organ and church building are one; the organ depends upon favourable acoustics for its ultimate success, and poor acoustics will deprive the finest organ of its grandeur. Reverberation is an acoustical property essential to sustaining warmth, colour, and the distinction of the various voices and of the tonal ensemble of the organ. Since the great musical literature of the church was conceived, composed and established in a reverberant acoustical environment, elementary musical taste requires that this great literature be heard under comparable acoustical conditions.

Favourable acoustics for the organ, choir, and speaker demand balanced acoustical design. Experience has proved that "dry" acoustics are as harmful for speech as for music, making necessary the use of speech reinforcement systems in small churches which, otherwise, would not need them.

In larger churches, the use of carefully designed speech reinforcement equipment will improve intelligibility and retain the natural quality of speech, while permitting more favourable musical acoustics.

Overly long periods of reverberation are detrimental to musical clarity as well as to speech, but musical clarity can be greatly aided by the natural articulation of skilfully voiced pipes.

Good proportioning of the building and the correct use of exposed interior materials will give excellent results in the majority of churches being built today. Coordination between organ builder and architect in the planning stage is the only way to solve the problems of acoustics and organ placement. Our competent consulting staff is always available for study of these problems and your inquiries are invited, without obligation.

233RD 3 CHOIRS FESTIVAL SET FOR SEPTEMBER DATES

The celebrated Three Choirs Festival will be held at Worcester, England Sept. 4-9. This is the oldest musical festival in existence and this will be its 233rd meeting. Many important choral works have been written especially for this festival in the past.

Douglas Guest is the festival conductor and the guest conductors for the festival chorus of 300 and the London and City of Birmingham symphony orchestras will be Sir Arthur Bliss, Meredith Davies and David Willcocks.

Among choral works to be heard this year are a first performance of Anthony Milner's The Water and the Fire, Lennox Berkeley's Stabat Mater, Petrassi's Magnificat, Kodaly's Budavari Te Deum, Bruckner's Mass in E minor, Bach's St. John Passion, Elgar's Dream of Gerontius, Vaughan Williams' Hodie, Janacek's The Eternal Gospel, Brahms' Requiem and Handel's Messiah.

MABEL BOYTER CONDUCTS FESTIVAL IN DALLAS, TEX.

Children's choirs from eight Dallas, Tex. churches of four denominations participated in a festival Feb. 21 at the Park Cities Baptist Church. Mabel S. Boyter, children's choir specialist of Atlanta, Ga. was the guest conductor; a brass ensemble assisted.

Music History Books

Two extraordinarily interesting books in the field of music history have reached us recently. The second volume in a series entitled Man and His Music in Oxford University Press' Essential Books imprint concerns itself with Late Renaissance and Baroque Music. Anthony Milner is the author and he writes about this vital period in a readable style. There are some thirty musical illustrations and about a dozen plates. A very detailed index and a list of recommended books should be helpful. The author wisely refrains from attempting to list recordings, merely pointing out groups and individuals whose recorded performances usually reflect authoritative scholarship.

Donald Jay Grant's A History of Western Music (W. W. Norton) seems to us a finely made textbook every teacher of a college course should pore over with greatest care. It is profusely illustrated, has an excellent bibliography, reference list and chronology and a twenty-one page index. American music is not fully explored; it rarely can be in a general text such as this.—F.C.

SIR ERNEST MacMillan conducted the choir of St. Paul's Church, Toronto in a performance of the Mozart Requiem April 15 with full orchestra and Charles Peaker at the organ.

Organ Music

Much of the organ music received this month is for manuals alone. Lionel Lotteridge has selected and edited J. S. Bach, an Album for Manuals Alone, for Oxford University Press. This contains a number of the Orgelbüchlein manual preludes and adds the prelude to the "fiddle" fugue and a movement from the Pastorale. Meticulous attention is given to the ornamentation.

E. Power Biggs Suite from the Little Note Book for Anna Magdalena Bach (Mercury) has some pleasant familiar keyboard material for manuals only and some chorales. It will have many uses.

G. Schirmer sends a Sonata by Pergolesi edited by Douglass Green, a one-movement Allegro for manuals said to be the composer's only work for the organ.

Three Folk-Fancies by Charles F. Waters are short, reasonably easy pieces with a touch of the unconventional; they are very suitable voluntary material (Oxford). Philip Cranmer's Pavan and Gaillard are more extended; the average organist may not find them quite so appealing.

A big chorale fantasia on Awake My Heart with Gladness by Jan Bender (Concordia) does some curious things with the rhythmic patterns.—F.C.

Lean Choral List Gives Office a Vacation

The considerable stack of new music which reached our desk this month boiled down considerably as we removed anthems mentioned in previous columns—always a time-consuming and exasperating task—and culled out the works of strictly secular character. This column is, as most readers and publishers know, necessarily confined to sacred choral music.

There were no large works in this month's supply which was largely of regular service anthems. A set of Graduals for the Church Year by Healey Willan (Concordia) will suggest its usefulness to directors of many denominations familiar over the years with the Canadian composer's distinguished output.

From Summy-Birchard come three multi-voiced items: an unaccompanied SSATBB Yet a Little While by Knut Nystedt; Sing a New Song by Robert Kreutz which divides to eight parts and has some interesting resonances, and an eight-part Alleluia by Robert McCowen for festival use. Austin Lovelace's O Day of God, Draw Nigh makes few demands; it is based on a motive which reminds us a bit of Appalachian folk material. A Mozart De Profundis edited by John Ohl will be valuable for average choirs to learn. Katherine K. Davis' SSA Lord God of Sabaoth has a very low alto part but is easy enough otherwise.

Oxford University Press has two by Samuel Adler: a big, rather difficult How Precious Is Thy Lovingkindness which has divisi and solo parts for soprano or tenor, and a shorter I Will Give Thanks, with divisi and a big ending.

Oxford makes available a Communion Service in C adapted by John Whitworth from Purcell which will interest liturgical musicians, and a Byrd Prevent Us, O Lord edited by A. J. Pritchard for a well-trained a cappella group. Henry Coleman's little Lo God Is Here, arranged from Grieg, adds minimal choral parts to a small solo. Norman Gilbert's Turn Back, O Man is direct and simple. The same composer has an SA Most Glorious Lord of Life for Easter. Also SA is C. S. Lang's well-made canon, Let All the World in Every Corner Sing.

GORDON BEAVER •

GORDON BEAVER has been appointed instructor of organ at the University of South Carolina, Columbia. He assumed his duties at the beginning of the spring semester. He is also organist-choirmaster at Ebenezer Lutheran Church in Columbia.

Mr. Beaver is a native of North Carolina. He received his bachelor degree in organ at Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C., and his MSM degree from Union Theological Seminary. His organ study has been with Christopher Thomas and Ernest White.

Saints, in the lengthily arranged version of the Salt Lake City Tabernacle's popular record is available from Galaxy. Leroy Robertson is the arranger. Gordon Young's God of Mercy, God of Grace is big in style and largely unison.

Carl F. Mueller uses his know-how to get a big effect with simple means in his Easter anthem, Lo, the Earth Is Risen Again (Carl Fischer). His Lord, to Whom Shall We Go, which won a 1959 Capitol University competition, is practical and singable.

Another prize, the SAI one, was won by Kirke Mechem's Give Thanks unto the Lord, a cappella with divisi (C. F. Peters) which does some antiphonal pitting of men's voices against women's. Healey Willan's Hymn Anthem on Breslau bolsters a simple choral part with a good organ background.

John Dressler has adapted a Beethoven melody for his simple Sing Praise to God (Abingdon Press).—F.C.

COOKEVILLE SCHOOL TO HAVE NEW SCHANTZ TENNESSEE POLYTECHNIC

Three-Manual Instrument Will Be Used for Teaching, Recitals and Practice—
Dr. Walter Wade of Music Staff
Planned Stoplist

The Schantz Organ Company has been given the contract to build a three-manual organ for the Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, Cookeville, Tenn. The new instrument will be placed in the recital hall which is being extensively renovated and modernized. It will be used for teaching, practice and recital work. Dr. Walter Wade is professor of organ at the school and planned the specification with Alfred E. Lunsford of the Schantz Company staff. The stoplist is as follows:

FOR 191 YEARS

... this beautiful Tannenburg organ case has been the symbol of worshipful music for the First Reformed Church in Lancaster, Pennsylvania (United Church of Christ). During this period, organs have been dedicated, worn out, and replaced with modern instruments four times over, but the original case work remains.

NOW THE ALLEN ORGAN is privileged to add its voice, using the science of electronics to produce a sound that is new in one sense and yet not unlike the sound that has been a part of worship in this grand, historic church for two centuries.

The instrument has been in use for two years and is an example of our recent work.

Church Acoustics Require Expert Designing

By ALBERT R. RIENSTRA
[Acoustical Consultant]

Acousticians or acoustical experts know that sound in a dead room stays by itself. Sounds in different parts of a dead room are isolated from each other. In a live room sounds are blended to be more uniform and location of the individual sound is less noticeable because of the consciousness of added space effect. Of course this does not mean that all sounds are heard as being alike. Sounds have character, but this character is preserved throughout the room. Thus the oneness of the group hearing the sound becomes more realistic.

The big question is how far can one go in livening up a church. Speech must be intelligible and we must preserve the proper atmosphere for group worship. Acousticians know or should know that a very dead room makes for poorer intelligibility than one with a slight amount of liveness. (The term "liveness" is used here as a more generalized name than reverberation since the latter is only one aspect of liveness.) This is aside from the need for sound reinforcement to make up for the sound energy lost in the absorbing material.

The liveness can be even greater than this. To achieve a goal of worshipful atmosphere for a group in a ritualistic service the liveness becomes appropriate for music without any sacrifice in speech beyond that called for in the ritual. In other words a quality of speaking suitable to a ritual can be, should be used for the sermon as well.

In the non-ritualistic service the emphasis of God being the focal point of the worship can be aided by a live atmosphere. The same necessity for clearness and carefulness in speaking applies. Moreover with more and more emphasis on music, and the fact that churches of all types are spending more and more for music, it does not make much sense to spend thousands of dollars for musicians and organs to work in difficult or impossible conditions. Churches now engage musicians with proper training. Musicians and schools from which they graduate should demand a proper atmosphere in which their alumni can work. In making this demand musicians and schools should be careful not to demand too much. Actually too much reverberation can be harmful to music as well as to speech.

What is the optimum acoustical condition for church auditoriums? From a musical point of view each vocal and instrumental part must be heard clearly in all parts of the room. If this condition is fulfilled speech will be clear and intelligible if spoken with any reasonable enunciation. In addition music must have a blend or cohesiveness. A certain amount of this can be achieved by vocal technique and organ design and method of playing. The final result relies on acoustics.

Optimum acoustics enhance music. What is the mechanism which accomplishes this enhancement? Without getting into too great technical details (the actual acoustical design of a room is purely a technical problem) let it be mentioned that reverberation is one important aspect of acoustics.

Reverberation is the persistence of sound, after the source ceases, due to reflections from the room boundaries. Other names such as echo or resonance are not accurate descriptions. An echo occurs when sound decay ceases and is heard again after reflection from some distant point. To be an echo there must be an interval of silence or almost silence.

Resonance implies a phenomenon of a single restricted frequency response. A panel or other object can be made to vibrate and emit a sound corresponding to this frequency when the latter is impinging on the object. This is known as sympathetic vibration. Associated with reverberation is a phenomenon which has the characteristic of resonance e.g. the normal nodes of vibration in any room. These vibrations are vibrations of the air in a room and have nothing to do with the above sympathetic vibration. Even a small room of 10,000 cubic feet will have hundreds of normal nodes of vibration and a large room thousands.¹ In order to avoid confusion it is better to use the term "reverberant" or "live" when referring to a room with reverberation.

The frequencies of the normal nodes of vibration are determined by the room dimensions. In any room of practical proportions the normal nodes of vibration are spaced irregularly. At these frequencies where the reflected waves coincide with incident waves, they reinforce each other, the peaks and nodes become stationary and we have "standing waves." At these frequencies, therefore, the decay of sound will be longer than at frequencies in between. The magnitude of the peaks is determined by the amount of reverberation i.e. by the character of the room boundaries. Normally in small rooms (under 50,000 cubic feet) the usually small amount of reverberation will result in low peaks and the irregularities are not so noticeable. However when the reverberation is increased and the length of sound decay prolonged (as will be recommended later in this paper) the effect of the irregularities can be heard.

One important feature of sound decay is that the nodes beat with each other. Suppose the organ is sounding CC (65.4 c.p.s.) and that the two nearest nodes of vibration are 64 and 66 c.p.s. When the organ ceases sounding 65.4 s.p.s. the 64 and 66 c.p.s. nodes are energized. They beat with each other during the decay period at a 2 c.p.s. rate. At higher pitches the frequencies of the nodes are closer together. It can be noted that the many frequencies in music would produce, during the decay and even while other frequencies are being produced, a very complicated pattern of beats in the reverberant sound. This then is a contributing factor to the enhancement of music due to reverberation. The larger the room the closer will be the spacing of the nodes frequencies and consequently the greater number energized and producing beats. Hence a greater enhancement exists. If the decay time is too short the enhancement effect cannot be heard. The longer the time the greater will be the effect.

In rooms smaller than 20,000 cubic feet the nodes may be spaced 10 c.p.s. apart. By choosing the proper ratio of room dimensions the irregularity of node spacing can be reduced and can be made close to the frequencies of the tempered scale. Hence one reason for starting the acoustical design with the general architectural design.

A statistical analysis of the distribution of the normal node frequencies shows the peaks to vary considerably. Peaks may be three to four times as strong as adjacent valleys of sound level. This fact can be taken advantage of in back between a microphone and loudspeaker reinforcement systems. Since feedback occurs at the highest peak where there is the least loss between the two instruments it is only necessary to shift the frequencies of the signals picked up by the microphone to obtain an improvement of at least three times, e.g. the microphone can be placed that much closer to the loudspeaker. A shift of 5 c.p.s. is not noticeable in speech. In music, especially vocal and organ, this would be noticed. However amplification of music is not recommended.

Recommended Reverberation

By definition the reverberation time is the time in seconds for the sound pressure level to decrease 60 db or the sound energy to one-millionth of its initial value. Since organ tones have many frequencies and are of different loudness and since noise levels vary considerably in buildings, organ tone can rarely be used to measure the reverberation time with any degree of accuracy. Special instruments are required. In addition to overall time of decay the exact method of decay must be measured and should meet the definite requirements which are fully as important as the 60 db decay time.

The appended table is an approximate guide for churches of various sizes. The data are for full rooms at frequencies from 300 c.p.s. to 5000 c.p.s. At lower frequencies there should in general be an increase. At higher frequencies the absorption should be as small as possible because of losses in the air. Variations in the above figures can be made in particular buildings to meet the particular needs of a congregation. These figures are only to be used as a guide and are not for design purposes.

Whereas the reverberation times are recommended as a very important aspect of church acoustics there are instances where two churches of equal reverberation times; one is good and the other is bad acoustically. The variation of reverberation time with frequency should not have any sharp variations. The exact manner in which the sound decays at each frequency can be the controlling factor in obtaining good acoustics.

General Acoustical Treatment

Curved surfaces whose focal points are in or near any listening area should be avoided. They are difficult if not impossible acoustically. The difficulty arises from the concentration of sound energy at the focal point with the result that in all the other areas the sound energy is low. Such unequal energy levels make listening poor, the focal point only being strong and all others weak. This is a fundamental law of nature e.g. Newton's law of the conservation of energy which states that energy can neither be created or destroyed. Therefore with a given amount of energy within a curved surface the concentration of most of it at the focal point leaves only a little for the rest of the area. Some have been left in this condition to show the extraordinary ease with which energy is transmitted from one focal point to another, whereas it is very difficult to transmit from points a short distance from the focal points. In other instances where attempts have been made to correct the difficulty it was necessary to make the curved surfaces absorbent and place flat reflectors across the diameter of the curved surface, thus reducing considerably the volume of the total enclosure, acoustically.

Rather than adorn room boundaries with curves it is far better to use rectangular protrusions and indentations of rather small magnitude. This breaks up large flat surfaces. It gives better dispersion of high frequency energy and has been found to give good acoustical conditions in a number of concert halls.

Noise and Quietness

The best and by far the easiest solution to the noise problem is to locate the church building in a quiet community. This assumes the quiet environment will persist. If there is a possibility the community may change and become noisy later, the church should be built accordingly.

The only way to treat for noise reduction is to build the walls, roof and flooring to keep out the noise sound. If sound gets in it is impossible to obtain good acoustical conditions. Noise silencing and good acoustics are incompatible. Noise has a greater detrimental effect on speech intelligibility than moderate amounts of reverberation. To attain the proper quiet worshipful atmosphere means walls, roof and doors have high transmission loss. Internal noise from heating and ventilating equipment and from other parts of the building, especially the narthex, must be highly attenuated. The principles apply to churches in the same way that they do to other types of buildings. Since acousticians know the principles involved better than anyone else they will not be repeated here. This is another reason for starting the acoustical design with the general architectural design. Incidentally a member of the firm of Bolt, Beranek and Newman has just announced a new type of wall structure design which has a high transmission loss to sound and which may prove economical to construct.

The acoustical properties of a room are controlled not only by the surface but by the type of construction back of the surface, the air space, which allows restricted vibration of the walls as panels. Here again the acoustician determines this construction just as much as the engineering architect determines it from a strength point of view.

The reflections of sound are to be controlled by surfaces close enough to the source that the first reflections which are of the greatest magnitude are not delayed beyond the amount to interfere with speech intelligibility. Each succeeding reflection must be controlled as to magnitude and time delay to provide uniform sound decay logarithmically at all frequencies to meet requirements of reverberation. The rear wall should be sloped forward to deflect reflections from it down into the middle of the room, thus to prevent long sound paths and hence interference to speech.

To meet the requirements of the table for large rooms a careful choice of materials must be made. Several different materials may be required. A proper amount of wood paneling with the proper air spaces and supporting of the edges usually are the best means of obtaining the required low frequency characteristic. Many irregularities in the wall and ceiling surfaces in the form of protrusions and indentations (windows, etc.) give a good dispersion of the high frequencies. Since high frequency absorption in the air is considerable in large rooms the surfaces should be as reflective as possible at high frequencies. To try to correct acoustical defects after a building is completed and even after the basic structure has been erected often is very expensive and sometimes impossible.

From the above statements of requirements it should be clearly evident that the only way to secure good acoustical design is to do this design in close conjunction with the whole design of the church building. The acoustical designer must be given the right to specify the proper materials and method of construction to achieve his design. It is therefore important to choose an architect who will co-operate with the acoustical designer so that satisfactory compromises can be made without friction.

Existing Buildings

The problems of existing buildings are almost as many and varied as the number of buildings having problems. Some common difficulties and their solutions will be mentioned.

Remove all carpet or absorption of any kind from the walls, floor and ceiling of chancels. If absorption exists in the chancel that is the end of the sound. Nothing else can help.

Carpet in the aisles should be thin and on the hard side. If ushers are noisy it is cheaper to furnish them with rubber heels than to carpet the floor.

If a ceiling has so-called acoustical tile or plaster, paint it to fill up all the holes. The ceiling and the chancel are the worst places for absorption. Sound starts in the chancel and depends largely on the ceiling for transmission to all parts of the nave.

The narthex can be well padded (highly absorbing) to keep the noise level low. To reduce the noise further the doors should be built accordingly. The outside door should not be in line with the inside doors. Another source of noise transmission is single glass windows. Double glass or better, double windows will reduce considerably such noise transmission.

A curved surface whose focus is in or near a listening area should be covered with absorbing material and flat reflectors placed so that the sound is distributed equally to all parts of the listening area involved. The architect will have to use lighting and color effects to make the reflectors as unobtrusive as possible.

If an auditorium has a large difference in reverberation time between an empty and full condition and especially if the liveness is excessive, the first thing to do is to place cushions on the pew seats and also backs if possible. A common offender in long churches is the rear wall. If it can be rebuilt to lean forward to deflect sound downward this is best. If not, cover it with a moderate amount of absorption.

It must be realized that changes in existing buildings may bring only partial correction and are compromises with the ideal. If sufficient money is available and major changes in construction are possible then a consideration of new building requirements should be made and an acoustical designer hired.

Organ Placement

An organ chamber constitutes a room coupled to the main auditorium. Hence the principles of coupled rooms apply except that the chamber is filled with the organ or it should be. Obviously the boundaries of the chamber should be as reflective as practical. This is for the purpose of getting all the sound out. If the chamber is only partially filled there will be a reverberation period of its own and since this is a relatively small room the enhancing character of reverberation will not exist. Rather it can be quite bad, because the normal nodes of vibration will be spaced too far apart for equalization of the pedal tones. Also a longer reverberation time than for the main auditorium means the sound will be all mixed up before it has a chance to get out.

All too often the boundaries of the chamber are hard board of some kind supported rather loosely especially in the center. This constitutes one of the best ways to provide low frequency absorption. Any panels should be well backed up with solid supports to prevent vibration at low frequencies. A wall plastered with cement provides a good reflector.

To get around the difficulties of organ chambers, the organ can be placed against a flat hard wall, out in the open as is becoming common practice now. Then the tone has the best chance to get to the nave. If there is a swell organ this can also be in the open with shutters on all sides and the top. It will then be advisable to place a screen transparent to sound to hide the movement of the shutters from view.

All too often the chancel or that portion of the organ used for choir accompaniment is too small for this purpose and more organ is placed at the opposite end of the church. In this situation in order that the choir or organist can hear any tone from the distant organ, the latter will be too loud for the congregation. Time intervals and sound intensities simply cannot be correct. There is always over accompaniment. Moreover for people sitting sideways the distant organ sound is distracting. Rather than spend money for a large organ away from the choir it would be better to spend some of it to enlarge the space near the choir.

All the organ which is necessary for choir accompaniment ideally should be located so that its sound travels further than that of the choir and yet in a straight line. Thus the organ sound can be as loud as the choir sound without being overstrong. A rear gallery location provides greater flexibility in providing ideal locations. Yet with proper screening it is possible to achieve in the chancel the same result.²

Conclusions

The obvious conclusion to this paper is that the acoustical design of a church auditorium is definitely a technical matter. As organists and church musicians we are interested because it has a direct bearing on the results of our work. To be of use however we must get the information contained herein to people who are influential in bringing about the accomplishment—church building committees, architects and general church bodies. It is hoped that this information will be a guide for them.

Belmont Methodist Church in Tennessee Capital Will Have Three-Manual in Fall — Richard Thomasson Is Minister of Music

An organ of forty-six ranks is to be installed in the Belmont Methodist Church, Nashville, Tenn. this fall as a major objective in celebrating the church's fiftieth anniversary. The organ is to be built by the Reuter Organ Company. A feature of the design is an antiphonal division to be installed just off the balcony level for use with one or more of the multiple choirs directed by Richard Thomasson, minister of music, who has been with the church for ten years.

This church, located in the populous West End section of Nashville, is noted for the excellence of its program for young people, made possible in part by the modern educational plant that covers a full block. The Sunday School is the twelfth largest in all of Methodism. A feature of the two-hour Sunday afternoon program is the concluding moments of prayer and meditation in the sanctuary, where soft lighting and organ music are effectively used.

The organ specifications were prepared by Mr. Thomasson, George Hamrick, the company representative, and Franklin Mitchell, tonal director of the Reuter organization. The stop list is as follows:

JOHN WEISSROCK

JOHN WEISSROCK, student at the College-Conservatory of Music of Cincinnati, Ohio, won the organ competition held March 19 at the First Presbyterian Church, Fort Wayne, Ind. As winner he will play a recital May 10 on the series at the Fort Wayne Church. He also was awarded a cash prize of $100.

A native of Sandusky, Ohio Mr. Weissrock has been a student of Wayne Fisher for nine years. He is the organist and choirmaster at Immanuel United Church of Christ, Cincinnati. He was the winner of the Cincinnati AGO organ contest in 1959.

Dr. Oswald Ragatz, Indiana University, served as adjudicator for the Fort Wayne event. Margaret McElwain, student of Arthur Carkeek at DePauw University, placed second in the competition.

FRANK OWEN, organist and choirmaster, shared the Lenten noonday series at St. Paul's Cathedral, Los Angeles, Cal. with Florence Hankins, assistant, and E. Robert Kursinski, San Marino.

Busch-Reisinger Flentrop Used in Biggs Album

Our first chance to hear the Flentrop in the Busch-Reisinger Museum at Harvard is probably our top organ record news this month. Columbia has issued a recording of Music for Organ and Brass with E. Power Biggs and the Boston Brass Ensemble conducted by Richard Burgin. Hearing the record emphasizes again the tragic loss to music lovers which the cancellation of Mr. Biggs' weekly CBS broadcasts has been.

The performance, the engineering and sound itself are all top-drawer. This is clearly the type of organ tone Mr. Biggs has been wanting all along.

A set of Intonations for organ alone and four Canzoni for organ and brass by Gabrieli are spirited, vital music served up with relish on one side. The other side contains five Canzoni for brass, harpsichord and organ enclosed between two Toccatas for organ alone. On stereo all this music is startling to hear; hifi addicts will be able to muster no sales resistance whatever.

No less a must is Mr. Biggs' third album of the Handel organ concertos. The circumstances of these recordings are already familiar to nearly all readers of this publication. This new set of two LPs contains the last four, the "miscellaneous" concertos. The favorite "Cuckoo and Nightingale" (13) will be well-liked; both the "name" movement and the adagio come through with great charm. The extensive sixteenth and the smaller fourteenth are welcome additions and we are especially glad to have the tiny fifteenth with its rollicking first movement.

The six little fugues (maybe Handel, maybe not!) complete the album. Like all of this player's albums these latest two are accompanied by informative and often highly entertaining program notes.

As a special bonus we were sent Mr. Biggs' record, so far distributed only in Mexico, of a recital on the huge Tamburini organ in Mexico City's Auditorio Nacional pictured and described in THE DIAPASON for February 1959. Here Mr. B. is frankly showing off on familiar recital material and having a whale of a good time doing it. The organ sounds big. We suspect this record would sell well in our country too.

Columbia also issues a fine record called Arias, Anthems and Chorales of the American Moravians, made with loving care by Thor Johnson conducting the Moravian Festival Chorus and orchestra. Ilona Kombrink sings the considerable soprano solo work beautifully and Aurelio Estanislao is nearly as good in the baritone parts. The editing is by the Clarence Dickinsons and Donald McCorkle. The whole project (this is only the first record) is a highly successful effort to give a sincere picture of a little known and remarkable phase of the development of music in America. It will be equally appreciated by church musicians and average laymen.

Another laudable project is the American Society Concerts-in-the-Home set of six long playing records grouped as "The Royal Music of Europe." The director of the project is Daniel Saidenberg and he has turned out a delightful set. Only one of the six records is really in our field: organ and harpsichord alternate on two sides of a disk of French music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries from Chambonnières through Balbastre. The organ is the Holtkamp in the General Theological Seminary (THE DIAPASON for January 1959) and the recorded sound of both it and the harpsichord is highly satisfactory. Paul Maynard plays both instruments with zest and understanding.

MISSA SOLEMNIS LISTED AT NATIONAL CATHEDRAL

The Washington and Cathedral choral societies will sing a complete performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis at the Washington Cathedral May 26. Soloists will be Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John Alexander and Donald Gramm. Paul Calloway will conduct.

W. MACDOWELL HORN

W. MACDOWELL HORN was honored Feb. 14 on the occasion of his completion of twenty-five years as organist and choir director for the Third Lutheran Church, Louisville, Ky.

A former pupil presided at the organ for the service and the children's choir was in the chancel. With Mr. Horn in the pews were present and former members of the several choirs under his direction. At the close of the service a beautifully inscribed silver bowl was given him; he received a watch at the regular choir rehearsal.

Mr. Horn is the chief engineer for the Kentucky inspection bureau. He is active in civic and fraternal organizations.

His mother, Julia Bachus Horn, prominent organist and choral director in the area for more than thirty years, was his principal teacher. He is an active member and past-dean of the Louisville AGO Chapter.

A SERIES of Wednesday evening Lenten recitals was played at the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church, St. Louis, Mo. by Robert W. Glover.

HOW LONG COULD YOU TOLERATE FAILURE OF WIND SUPPLY?

Not long, if you're like most organists! And it's this absolute necessity for complete reliability that has made the Spencer Orgoblo® first choice of leading organ builders for 67 years. Important, too, in establishing the eminence of ORGOBLO have been these reassuring realities:

Request descriptive bulletins on Orgoblos from 1/4 H.P. up.

The SPENCER
TURBINE COMPANY
HARTFORD 6, CONNECTICUT

- Immediate availability of replacement parts. Spencer has on file detailed blueprints of every Orgoblo ever built. On occasion the company has provided, in a matter of hours, replacement parts for Orgoblos built over 50 years before.
- Willingness and facilities to provide prompt service—nationwide.

MISS LEDDY, AUTHORITY ON CATHOLIC MUSIC, DIES

Margaret Leddy, 49, faculty member of Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, Purchase, N.Y. died March 16 at St. Agnes hospital, White Plains after a long illness.

Miss Leddy was a graduate of Manhattanville College, received her master degree at Columbia University and studied for her doctorate at the Catholic University, Washington, D.C. She was a member of the executive board of the national Catholic music educators association, chairman of its department of musicology and a member of the committee on sacred music of the NASM.

An ardent liturgist and church musician, Miss Leddy was an authority who conducted courses in many cities of the United States and Canada. She helped spread knowledge of and participation in the music of the church in places where it was little known.

She is survived by two brothers. Members of the music department of the college were joined by the Pius X choir in singing the requiem mass.

MRS. GRUENSTEIN PASSES IN WINNETKA HOME AT 81

Miriam McNitt Gruenstein, widow of the late Siegfried E. Gruenstein, founder and longtime editor and publisher of THE DIAPASON, died March 13 at her home in Winnetka, Ill. at the age of 81.

In the early days of the magazine Mrs. Gruenstein worked at her husband's side in the circulation and record-keeping aspects of the publication. She also was his frequent companion at recitals and other organ events.

ALAN BIGGS, for forty-six years organist of Christ Church, St. Leonards, Hastings, England died Jan. 22. An organist since the age of 8 he also was a writer, composer and music critic.

TOMANEK PLAYS NEW WORKS WRITTEN FOR SOLEMN RITE

Three compositions for a brass quartet and organ were performed March 17 in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Norwich, Conn. at the consecration and installation of Bishop Vincent J. Hines. Intrata Pontificalis, Chorale, and Ad Multos Annos were written by Vaclav Nelhybel, New York City, specifically for this occasion and were performed by members of the Hartford Symphony and Godfrey Tomaneck, cathedral organist. Written in a medieval polyphonic style, Mr. Nelhybel's compositions were a match for the Gothic cathedral and the ancient consecration ceremonies.

MUSIC OF THREE CENTURIES HEARD AT GREENSBORO, N.C.

The Collegium Musicum of the Greensboro, N.C. College under the direction of Harold G. Andrews, Jr. was heard March 22 in a program of sacred choral music of the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Composers represented were: Dufay, Des Pres, de la Rue, Willaert, Walther, Tye, Gabrieli, Palestrina, Sweelinck, Hasler, Gibbons, Schütz, Buxtehude and Purcell.

FOURTH ANNUAL TOUR MADE BY CONSERVATORY CHORUS

The New England Conservatory tour chorus made its fourth annual tour through New England and New York in April. Lorna Cooke deVaron was conductor, William Tortolano assistant conductor and Charles Johnson organist. Portions of the Mozart Requiem and of Bach's Cantata 4 and Motet 1 and a number of shorter works comprised the program.

RUSSELL J. BRYDON, JR.

RUSSELL J. BRYDON, Jr., organist-choir-master of the Church of the Incarnation, Dallas, Tex. for eleven years and organist of Temple Emanuel, has been granted a sabbatical leave for one year to study and observe music in Europe. Mr. Brydon is a graduate of Southern Methodist University, a pupil of Dora Potet Barclay.

In September he attended the Royal School of Church Music studying with Derick Holman and Sir William Harris. Plans for the rest of the year include the major musical events on the continent. He will return in August. His wife and son are accompanying him.

Winfred Johnson, St. Mark's School, Dallas, is the interim organist for the Church of the Incarnation.
